What is letterboxing?

This activity is inspired by the hobby of letterboxing. Letterboxing is an outdoor hobby that combines elements of treasure hunting, hiking, art, and orienteering. Letterboxers look for small boxes that have been hidden in public spaces. Once a box is found, inside the letterbox will be a stamp, often hand-carved, for the letterboxer to make an imprint in their journal, and a log book, for the letterboxer to leave their own mark.

The Huyck Explorer Challenge adds a fun goal to hikes at the Preserve and may bring you to corners of the Huyck Preserve that may have otherwise gone unexplored.

How it works

There are seven stamps placed in the trailhead kiosks around the Huyck Preserve. one stamp for each kiosk. There is also a hidden eighth bonus stamp! Collect prints from at least five stamps and submit a picture at www.huyckpreserve.org/HuyckExplorer or to our email, info@huyckpreserve.org to get a prize!

To do this activity, you will need:

- an ink pad or marker to ink the stamps
- a piece of paper, notebook, or a Huyck explorer guide to make your stamp marks

Ink pads can be borrowed from the Visitors' Center or from the Rensselaerville Library.

Hidden Stamp Clue

Begin your journey at the Eldridge Research Center. Walk down the road past the spillway to the east entry of Lincoln Pond Trail.

Follow Lincoln Pond Trail until you reach a place where a human-made wooden structure crosses over the water. Look for a box attached to the railing.
